Year 2000

Crop and Livestock Report

In the late 1800's, the wholesale distribution of fruits and vegetables in Los Angeles County had its beginning in downtown Los Angeles at the old plaza located near Olvera Street. Local farmers would bring in their produce daily by horse and wagon and offer it for sale. Customers strolled among the horses and wagons purchasing fruits and vegetables. For years the market place flourished. It was the place where everyone in the County came to buy fresh produce. Over time, as the population of the County of Los Angeles expanded and a greater percentage of products came from points outside the immediate Los Angeles area, the inadequacy of maintaining a market away from railroad facilities became apparent. Around 1901, the city leased some property at Third Street and Central Avenue to alleviate the problem. However, the distributors decided that their needs would be better served by a privately owned company. In 1903, they formed the Los Angeles Market Company, took over the city lease and constructed sheds on the site to house the operations of the distributors. In 1909, Southern Pacific Railroad, wanting to expand its rail terminal facilities, exchanged property located at Sixth and Alameda Streets for the Third Street site and the produce market moved to the new location in 1909. However, not all of the distributors moved to the new quarters. A new market, known as the City Market Company of Los Angeles, was incorporated in April of 1909. This market, one of the oldest in the County of Los Angeles, encompasses ten acres and is located on San Pedro Street between Ninth and Twelfth Streets.

In 1918, the Los Angeles Market Company constructed elaborate marketing facilities on a site located at Seventh Street and Central Avenue. The following year the market had financial difficulty and was acquired by the Los Angeles Union Terminal Company, a subsidiary of Southern Pacific Railroad. The Railroad Company moved the market from the Sixth and Alameda Street location to the Seventh Street and Central Avenue location.

Commonly known as the Seventh Street Market, the produce section covers 12 acres, has railroad facilities, and is now called the Terminal Market. In 1986, construction was completed on a new facility, the Los Angeles Wholesale Produce Market. Located on Olympic Boulevard and between Central Street and Alameda Avenue. The market encompasses 30 acres and is separated from the Terminal Market by Eight Street.

Today, Los Angeles County has two wholesale produce markets and a total of 740 licensed wholesalers and brokers to handle the volume. Although a large volume of California's fruits and vegetables are shipped directly to the Los Angeles metropolitan area from farmers throughout the State, approximately 60% transits through the Los Angeles wholesale produce markets. The Los Angeles wholesale produce markets easily rank first in the nation on quality and variety of products. Each year more than 95,000 carload equivalents of produce are handled which include more than 80 different fruit and vegetable commodities and numerous varieties of each. The Los Angeles wholesale produce markets play a key role in distributing California's agricultural products along with fresh fruits and vegetables from over 32 states and 20 foreign countries.

2000 CROP AND LIVESTOCK REPORT

The gross value of agricultural crops and products in Los Angeles County increased 8% in 2000 to $268,200,000. This is the 7th time in 8 years that agricultural production has increased after several years of declines. As in the last few years, the increase is driven for the most part by the continuing expansion of food production in the Antelope Valley. Acreage in the categories, Vegetables, and Fruit and Nuts, increased significantly, 28% and 15% respectively. Values increasing over 30%. Also contributing was the inclusion, for the first time since 1994, of figures for Livestock and Poultry, with a value of $1,770,000.

Ornamental nursery production continues to be our leading crop, but despite a strong market, value is down 6%, based on a decrease in acreage and green house space of approximately 10%. Causes for this decline include consolidations in the industry, the growth of large chain store nurseries, and the high cost of land in Los Angeles County. The presence of the Glassy Winged Sharpshooter could also be a factor.

In spite of being one of the largest metropolitan areas in the country, Los Angeles County produces 25 different crops, of which 16 are on the Million Dollar list: ornamental trees and shrubs, bedding plants, root vegetables, dry onions, peaches, alfalfa hay, foliage indoor plants, herbs, dairy products, ground covers, strawberries, flowering indoor plants, poultry, rangeland, vine crops and table greens.

Finally, I want to express my sincere appreciation to all the producers and individuals who provided information for this report, particularly the compilers, Richard Sokulsky, Deputy Agricultural Commissioner and Julia Chen, Staff Assistant.

Respectfully submitted

Cato R. Fiksdal

Agricultural Commissioner/

Director of Weights and Measures

This annual publication presents statistical information on acreage, yield and gross value of agricultural products produced in Los Angeles County. This is in accordance with Sections 2279 and 2279 of the California Food and Agricultural Code. The production values in this report represent gross values and do not reflect the cost of production, net income or loss to producers.
