SUBJECT: 2010-11 INFLUENZA SEASON – UPDATE #2

This is follow-up to the September 15, 2010 memo in which I informed you of the Department of Public Health's (DPH) plan for the 2010-11 influenza (flu) season.

Immunization Resources and Vaccine Availability

Beginning October 23, 2010 through January 18, 2011, DPH will host a 147 flu outreach clinics and an additional 11 points of distribution (PODs) events held at larger venues throughout the County. The flu vaccine will also be available throughout the flu season at DPH clinics. As in years past, DPH is encouraging Los Angeles County residents to contact their regular healthcare provider to arrange for flu vaccine.

Attached is the schedule of flu outreach clinics and PODs that will be held in each supervisorial district. This information as well as educational materials for parents or providers are available on the DPH website (www.publichealth.lacounty.gov). By entering their zip code, individuals will be able to find the nearest flu clinic and/or view the complete vaccine clinic outreach schedule by date, service planning area (SPA), or supervisorial district. The 211 LA County information line will also provide this information as well as referrals to private providers and community sites offering immunizations at no charge or at a reduced cost.

Immunization Recommendations

A separate vaccine will not be needed to protect against pandemic H1N1 flu. A single trivalent vaccine will provide protection from the flu virus strains that are mostly likely to circulate this fall.

The Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices (ACIP) has recommended universal flu vaccination for all persons ages six months or older who do not have a contraindication to vaccination (e.g., egg allergies). While no flu vaccine shortage is expected this season, in the event that uptake is high, guidelines to vaccinate high-risk patients first will be implemented.

Pneumococcal and Tdap Vaccines

In addition to the flu vaccine , two other vaccines, the pneumococcal vaccine and the Tdap (Tetanus, Diphtheria, and acellular Pertussis), will be offered at all DPH flu outreach clinics this season. These vaccines will be offered to patients who are screened and found eligible for vaccination. The pneumococcal vaccine will be offered primarily to individuals over the age of 65, and Tdap will be primarily given to those who have contact with infants under the age of six months and/or who are not currently up-to-date with their Tdap vaccinations.

If you have any questions or would like additional information, please let me know.
