This Board has committed funding to new affordable housing production, services to the homeless, and the Department of Regional Planning is implementing a Work Plan aimed at promoting more Equitable Development. when values go up. In order to pay increased rents, tenants must expend less on other necessities of life. In addition to placing an undue hardship on low-income families, reduced consumption impedes neighborhood economic development.

There are various examples throughout the country of policies designed to address rental rates, security of tenure, building conditions, and landlord-tenant relations. Implementation of these types of tenant protection programs requires further study, coordination with cities, discussion and recommendations by experts and stakeholders, the elaboration of a County administrative framework, and potentially also changes to State law. However, there need be little or no cost to the County general fund if administrative costs are recovered through a small per unit fee paid by landlords. It is time to advance these policies on behalf of the tenants of Los Angeles County.
