Introducing: Artist Support Services

The Painted Brain is committed to promoting the development of young artists facing life's challenges. Our individualized support services will be offered at our office and will include:

- opportunities to show/sell work at ArtWalk
- setting up a website or portfolio
- finding open-mikes for poetry and music
- finding space and materials for making art
- support in showing work at galleries
- submitting work to magazines and contests
- guidance in writing artist's statements
- access to a thriving community of artists

Program starts in September. Space is limited.

August 2013 by Dave Leon

It's been a quiet month in Lake Wobegon, er, PB world. We're settling into our new space with the incredible BACUP team at our new address (see below) and planning for the incoming interns. This is going to be a very big year at the Painted Brain, as always, but even bigger and better than ever. Read on...

We are partnering with Peer Support Network to conduct a yearlong Stigma Reduction and Media Production project at the LA Conservation Corps.

We're introducing an amazing new program, Artist's Support Services, to help artists attain their personal goals. More info to the upper right. ↗

For three months running, we've been rocking two booths at the downtown ArtWalk, featuring artist Ashley Payne making art with strangers in front of the Hive.

The Painted Brain will be offering a small number of free individual therapy hours. Contact me directly for details: thepaintedbrain@gmail.com

This year the Painted Brain is expanding our internal programs, with more workshops, support groups, and cool events like the upcoming open mike night. ↗

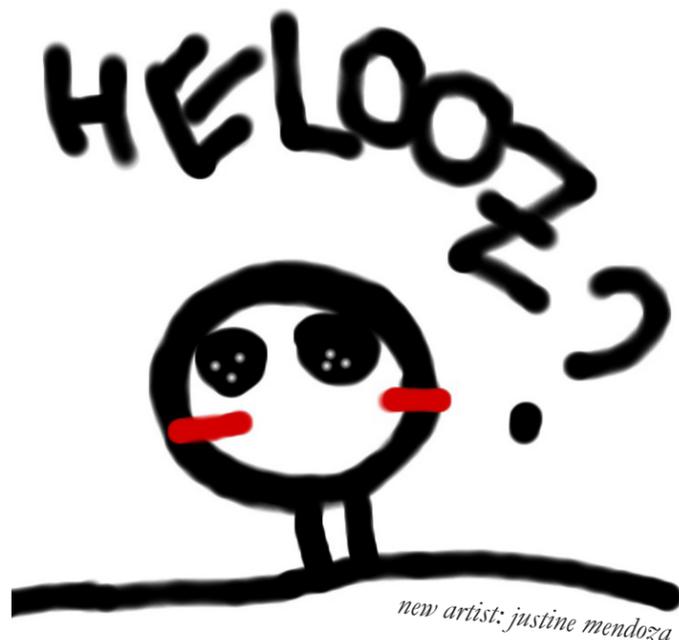

Two Painted Brain artists are running weekly groups: Corey at Daniel's Place Fridays at 1 and Ozzy at Southbay Mental Health Wednesdays at 1, too.
