II. REPORT

4. Report by Adolfo Gonzales, Chief Probation Officer. (21-1466)

Brandon Nichols, Chief Deputy Probation Officer, reported on the following:

- Adolfo Gonzales, Chief Probation Officer, is in the process of hiring staff in the positions of Chief Deputies for Adult and Juvenile Bureaus, and a Deputy Director position for the Adult Bureau. Information on these positions is available on the Probation Department website: <https://probation.lacounty.gov/>;
- The Probation Department continues to conduct tours of their facilities for Probation Oversight Commission members and Juvenile Justice Coordinating Committee (JJCC) subcommittee members;
- The JJCC subcommittee is continuing to work on the transition plan for youth who will no longer be transferred to the Department for Juvenile Justice (DJJ);
- The Probation Department is evaluating the impact of the Humphrey decision where the California Supreme Court ruled that defendants shall not be detained while awaiting trial if they cannot afford to pay bail.

Jose Osuna and Zoe Rawson addressed the Los Angeles Probation Oversight Commission (POC).

Commissioner Garcia-Leys requested that the Humphrey ruling be placed on a future agenda to gain a brief overview and its functionality.

In response to Commissioner Dupuy's inquiry on the public's access to resources and public services when youth are released from probation, Chief Deputy Nichols explained that Probation ad hoc committees dedicate time within their communities offering presentations on services their organizations provide for youth and adults released from probation.

Commissioner Meredith acknowledged the Probation Department's transparency and commended the Probation staff who work on ad hoc committees for their dedicated work in identifying resources available.

Commissioner Yamashiro requested a brief report to clarify the extent to which the Probation Department and its field officers are departing from their traditional roles to conduct these services and do proactive outreach with youth who are not yet court-involved, which may informally bring youth into the juvenile justice system.

By Common Consent, there being no objection, the POC accepted Chief Deputy Nichols' report.

5. Report by Alain Datcher, Executive Director, Los Angeles County Youth Commission. (21-1491)

Alain Datcher, Executive Director, Los Angeles County Youth Commission (LACYC) reported on the following:

- An overview of the establishment and goals of LACYC, not limited to shaping policy and providing the Board of Supervisors and other departments with tools and information that are youth centered and youth specific;
- LACYC membership and selection process;
- The creation of standing committees;
- Opportunities for partnering with the Los Angeles Probation Oversight Commission (POC) and other initiatives.

Gloria Gonzalez addressed the POC.

In response to Commissioner Dupuy's inquiry on LACYC's first meeting, Mr. Datcher reported that it is tentatively scheduled for early July. Currently, he is working on developing the membership application and by early May will have the Board of Supervisors' representatives appointed to the LACYC.

In response to the potential partnership between the youth commission and youth who are currently detained in juvenile halls and camps, the goal is to potentially select a commissioner(s) currently and directly involved in the probation system. In addition, ad hoc committees will include young people currently at probation camps.

By Common Consent, there being no objection, Mr. Datcher's report was accepted.

III. DISCUSSIONS

6. Discussion and take appropriate action on the closure of the State of California Department of Juvenile Justice (DJJ): Transition Plan. (Continued from the meeting of 3/25/21)
- Patricia Soung, Consultant
 - Kent Mendoza, Anti-Recidivism Coalition
 - Tshaka Barrows, Haywood Burns Institute
 - Laura Ridolfo, Haywood Burns Institute
 - Brandon Nichols, Chief Deputy Probation Officer, Compliance and Strategic Planning (21-1338)

Brandon Nichols, Chief Deputy Probation Officer, announced that he will be the Probation Department representative and Chair of the JJCC subcommittee for the DJJ Transition Plan.

Vice Chair Jackson discussed the site visits at Barry J. Nidorf Juvenile Hall (Nidorf) and Campus Kilpatrick, Camp Gonzalez, and Camp Dorothy Kirby. The intention of the visits was to consider if the facilities were suitable sites for DJJ replacement, based on location, conditions, core values, programming, staffing, title compliance, etc. Vice Chair Jackson referenced her previous question about using a tool kit to evaluate sites as the recommendation cannot be made on the Los Angeles Probation Oversight Commissioners' expertise alone; and noted that conditions at each site, and in particular Nidorf, felt prison like, without youth councils in existence and due to the overall attitude of line staff and educators. Commissioner Nong recommended that Nidorf should not be used as a DJJ alternative.

Tshaka Barrow, Haywood Burns Institute, and representative of the DJJ Transition Team, stated that the time constraints caused by the Governor's short deadline for closing state facilities, there is little chance to develop a new facility.

Wendelyn Julien, Executive Director, read two written public comments on behalf of Kenzo Sohoue and Sophia Cristo.

Gloria Gonzalez, Thomas Bell, Aditi Sherikar, Edin Madrid, Ezekiel Nishiyama, Jared O'Brien, Betty Fang, Marquis Smith, Leah Gasser Ordaz, Eduardo Mundo, Roberta Shintani and Alexia Cina addressed the Los Angeles Probation Oversight Commission (POC).

Commissioner Meredith added that the population in camps and halls has been reduced and the public seems to be unaware of this reduction.

Commissioner Yamashiro commented that the existing camps are too carceral and requested that the Probation Department and the subcommittee refer to the models outlined in the report submitted by the DJJ Transition Team (DJJTT) along with recommendations on how the County should navigate their transition. He requested DJJTT to highlight the key features of the models they chose and why those features were important. He also referred a question to the Probation Department on how the DJJTT's report impacted their search for a facility and how they are defining security in the process of vetting a location.

Mr. Barrows addressed the issue of security for the DJJ facility, and the recommendation is to abandon a punishment model and create something that at this moment does not exist.

In response to Commissioner Yamashiro's concerns, Chief Deputy Nichols informed that the Probation Department will not make decisions on facilities to be used for housing the DJJ youth, the decision will be made by the Board of Supervisors, based on the recommendations of the JJCC subcommittee comprised of representatives from the Departments of Probation, Mental Health, Public Social Services, Office of the District Attorney, the Public Defender's Office, the Los Angeles County Office of Education, and five community representatives. In addition, due to the Governor's deadline for closing state facilities, an existing site for DJJ youth would have to be considered by July 1st, not as a permanent site but as a temporary one until the process for creating a new and improved site is established.

In response to a concern raised by Commissioner Saltzman's about the possible impact on youth currently in the facilities being considered who could be displaced if a new population is moved into them, Laura Ridolfo, Haywood Burns Institute, clarified that the JJCC subcommittee is charged with developing a plan for the young people who are subject to DJJ, which includes a health first, care first focused approach.

Commissioner Dupuy asked the consultants if they were able to obtain all the data needed for the justice reimaged process. Ms. Ridolfo responded that obtaining data from the Probation Department has been a challenge.

Discussion ensued between DJJ Transition Team members, Probation representatives, and POC commissioners surrounding sharing data and data transparency, and the Probation Department's role in focusing on a reduced population in juvenile facilities. Commissioner Dupuy suggested that there should be further discussion about creating an ad hoc committee to specifically address the collection and sharing of data.

By Common Consent, there being no objection, this item was received and filed.

He suggested that the committee's four members should be officially selected and expressed an interest in acquiring additional members comprised of impacted people, line staff, probation officers and teachers.

Chair Hilda L. Solis, First Supervisorial District, addressed the Los Angeles Probation Oversight Commission (POC) via video on the importance of having an Education Standing Committee.

Gloria Gonzales, Jael Ovalle, Lupita Carballo, Jared O'Brien, Betty Fang, Jacob Jackson, Marquis Smith and Mel Bailey addressed the POC.
