24.		Oppose	Monisha Parker	There are several ways to reduce the Department of Health Services Mobile Clinic Fee Waiver in 2024: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Conduct a thorough analysis of the current fee waiver program to identify any inefficiencies or areas where costs can be reduced. This may include streamlining administrative processes, negotiating better rates with vendors, or implementing cost-saving measures. 2. Explore alternative funding sources to support the mobile clinic program, such as seeking grants or partnerships with local organizations or businesses. 3. Review eligibility criteria for the fee waiver program to ensure that only those who truly need financial assistance are receiving it. Tightening eligibility requirements can help reduce the number of individuals receiving the waiver and ultimately lower costs. 4. Implement strategies to increase revenue, such as offering fee-based services or implementing a sliding scale fee structure based on income. 5. Collaborate with other departments or agencies to share resources and reduce overhead costs associated with operating the mobile clinic program. By implementing these strategies, the Department of Health Services can work towards reducing the Mobile Clinic Fee Waiver in 2024 while still providing essential services to those in need.
