		Other	Dakota Kelly	National Career Development Month is an excellent idea. However, more action is needed than just a proclamation. California is entering into a serious problem with the youth not having a dream, vision, and actionable plan for their career future. Per Public Policy Institute of California, " If recent trends continue, California is likely to face a shortage of workers with some college education but less than a bachelor's degree by 2025. In fact, the future gap among "some college" educated workers may be as high as 1.5 million-even larger than the projected one-million-worker shortage of college graduates." Los Angeles County should invest in this proclamation by allowing LAC employees to speak at high schools and community colleges about their chosen profession within the county during the month of November. LAC employees would be coded as a regular work day
