

Revised Promoting Economic Resilience: Supporting the Small Business Interruption Fund and Launching Cash Aid for Impacted Families

For nearly 2 months, federal immigration tactics have led to scenes of horror displayed in streets across Los Angeles County. Communities across the County have been terrorized by masked individuals in plain clothing and unmarked cars taking individuals from their workplaces, leaving their families wondering where they are and when they will see their loved one again.

With nearly 1 in 5 Angelenos being either undocumented or living with someone who is, the impact of the Trump Administration’s hard lined immigration tactics runs deep through the culture and roots of Los Angeles County’s neighborhoods and workforce. The streets in Los Angeles County are visually emptier with many workers afraid to leave their homes. Several industry sectors, such as construction, farming and hospitality are critical to the backbone of the nation’s economy yet are seeing some of the heaviest economic impact due to the fact their workforce is composed of a significant number of immigrants. Loss of workforce, loss of wages, and loss of foot traffic in small businesses due to the upheaval caused by immigration enforcement will impact our economy.

Additionally, families impacted by recent ICE arrests have seen vehicles, vending carts, food trucks, tools and work equipment abandoned in public spaces and on their clients’ properties.¹ Community advocates and law enforcement are scrambling to identify owners and return these items, often after crucial hours have passed, adding significant emotional and financial strain. These items, often essential to family income and daily life, are abandoned due to forced detentions, not neglect. Charging fees, risking theft of equipment, or risking impoundment would compound hardship on already traumatized households, undermining community resilience and economic stability.

The end of the Trump Administration's aggression towards immigrants has maintained a focus on worksites with no end in sight, thus a continued commitment to funding the small business interruption fund servicing the entire County is essential to help avoid permanently shuttered businesses. Although this interruption fund is currently in progress due to the passage of Item 51-C in the June 17, 2025, County Board of Supervisors meeting, the broad need will require additional funding. It is also essential that the County limits the negative financial impact detained immigrants, and their families, might incur due to their equipment or tools being left behind.

Since individuals are being taken by immigration officials abruptly and primarily in workplaces, it is difficult for businesses to dispense earned income to persons that have been deported, and for both detained and deported individuals to access earned income when they need it the most. Although laws and processes currently exist to ensure earned income makes its way to "unlocatable workers" or their beneficiaries, many people are unaware of their rights regardless of immigration status and how to access their own earned income after deportation or how their families can also retrieve their funds.

Since it is unclear for how long the intense, constant immigration raids will continue, it is pertinent that the County helps ensure workers afraid to return to work, and families that have lost their bread winner to deportation, have cash assistance from a fund that is available long-term. Such a fund would help curb a potential rise in homelessness and provide a financial bridge to families impacted by the raids.

A ripple effect of the Trump Administration's extreme deportation tactics has led to animal shelters in LA County seeing a rise in animals at facilities. Pets are being found in empty apartments and homes due to their owners being taken by federal agents. Despite data being difficult to collect on this issue, Los Angeles County Department of Animal Care and Control (DACC) has begun to track the impact of the mass deportations on animals being accepted at their facilities. Dog surrenders more than tripled at LA County animal care centers in Palmdale and Downey in the fourth week of June alone². As more data is collected across all LA County animal care centers, these numbers are expected to rise further. Additionally, persons afraid to receive services due to risk of being taken, separated from their families, and sent to an unknown place are not only withholding from healthcare for themselves but for their pets as well. The Los Angeles Times reported that pet clinics are reporting a surge in no-shows and missed appointments in communities where the raids have been more frequent.

Since animal shelters across the County are already at capacity due to ongoing issues with backyard breeding, lack of knowledge or access to resources, disparity in housing access for pet owners, and the recent fires in January 2025, this additional man-made crisis will add to the number of animals that will lose their lives to make room for more animals to be taken in. Additionally, by law each animal must be spayed-neutered before being adopted or fostered. With only 50% of the veterinarian staffing level filled, and a shortage of registered veterinary technicians, a bottleneck exists adding to the overflow in the shelters and the decrease in community veterinary services being provided. Now is the time to capacity build in the County's animal care centers to help reduce the number of animal lives lost due to this man-made crisis.
