

REVISED MOTION BY SUPERVISORS KATHRYN BARGER AND LINDSEY P. HORVATH

JUNE 16, 2026

STREAMLINING HOMELESSNESS PREVENTION SERVICES INCLUDING FOR FIRE IMPACTED COMMUNITIES IN LOS ANGELES COUNTY

On January 7, 2025, the Eaton and Palisades Fires devastated the Altadena, Pacific Palisades, Sunset Mesa, Malibu, and Topanga communities, destroying thousands of homes, local businesses, and community spaces, which fundamentally disrupted the financial well-being and long-term housing security of thousands of Los Angeles County residents. Many fire survivors have worked to remain in their community during recovery through creative interim arrangements, including relocation to nearby rentals and temporary accommodations, but those solutions - including hotel stays, Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) individual assistance programs, Additional Living Expense (ALE) benefits from insurance, and short-term rentals - are not designed to last the duration of rebuilding timelines. Fire survivors are now simultaneously carrying a mortgage on a destroyed home and paying rent elsewhere, with insurance payouts that are delayed or insufficient to cover full rebuilding costs, which places fixed-income homeowners, and seniors in particular, at acute risk of housing instability and potential homelessness.

In response to the housing crisis created by the wildfires and broader affordability pressures across the region, the County has invested significantly in emergency rent relief to help stabilize at-risk residents and prevent a surge in homelessness. The Department of Consumer and Business Affairs (DCBA) has been at the forefront of administering these relief programs, working to connect eligible County constituents with time-sensitive rental assistance before housing instability escalates. DCBA's experience in emergency rent relief administration makes it a critical partner in building a durable, coordinated prevention infrastructure that can serve residents before and beyond a disaster context.

In the immediate aftermath of the 2025 Los Angeles County wildfires, many residents relied on federal assistance programs to address urgent housing needs during the recovery process. As recovery efforts continue, the County is working to better understand the scale of ongoing needs among impacted residents who are currently receiving or have previously received housing assistance through FEMA. accurate and timely information is critical to ensuring that available resources continue to be aligned with the realities faced by survivors as they work through recovery and rebuilding. The County has also developed a survey that was shared with survivors to gather information about their current housing status to assess the current scale of need to inform a potential County request for an extension of FEMA housing assistance. The County's Office of Emergency Management (OEM) is working directly with the California Office of Emergency Services (CalOES) and FEMA to uplift the voices of survivors who are facing immense challenges.

Ending homelessness across Los Angeles County requires a sustained and well-resourced commitment to prevention, which research consistently identifies as one of the most cost-effective interventions in the homelessness response system because it is far less costly than shelter, interim housing, or permanent supportive housing placements. The benefits of preventative services are frequently underrepresented in traditional data systems because a crisis avoided does not appear in standard metrics yet demand for prevention services remains significant. Interviews with individuals who have experienced homelessness consistently show that few were aware of available prevention resources before losing their housing. Prevention must be understood broadly and include interventions such as short-term rental assistance, legal services, housing navigation, disaster recovery support, income assistance, mediation, mental health support, and connections to mainstream benefits before a housing crisis escalates. Through this motion, the County seeks to strengthen access to multiple forms of prevention while deepening coordination across Departments, cities, and community partners to better align services and care.

Since the passage of Measure A, the voter-approved half-cent sales tax to fund homeless services across Los Angeles County, the homelessness prevention referral landscape has shifted significantly. The Los Angeles County Affordable Housing Solutions Agency (LACAHS) and the Los Angeles County Development Authority (LACDA) now serve as primary recipients and administrators of Measure A funds dedicated to affordable housing production, preservation, and homelessness prevention, with local jurisdictions receiving significant portions of this funding. Other County Departments, such as Department of Child and Family Services (DCFS), Department of Public Social Services (DPSS), Aging & Disability Department (AAD) and Department of Mental Health (DMH) often serve as the first line of defense when people are experiencing a crisis, and they administer key prevention resources. LACAHS is in the process of creating a centralized coordination point for homelessness prevention referrals and the newly established Department of Homeless Services and Housing (HSH) is now the County's lead department for coordinating the regional homelessness response, including overseeing the transition of functions previously administered by the Los Angeles Homeless Services Authority (LAHSA), and is uniquely positioned to serve as a convener of County departments and bridge to partner agencies on the topic of homelessness prevention.

In order to support survivors, and other Angelinos facing housing challenges, there must be a unified, publicly accessible resource created to inform residents about all available homelessness prevention services throughout the County. This online platform should provide information on which agency or partner is best suited to meet their needs, as well as guidance on how to access rental assistance, legal aid, housing navigation, or other time sensitive- supports before housing instability escalates into homelessness. A public-facing prevention resource, paired with an internal referral pathway, will effectively strengthen homelessness prevention by reducing barriers to access.

Access and outreach of available resources will be a critical step to ensuring that fire survivors are aware of the assistance the County is providing. On the ground, Disaster Case Managers and Long-Term Recovery groups, working across our communities, are engaging deeply with survivors on a day-to-day basis and it is paramount that the County coordinate our efforts with them. Expanding our reach into communities will require community-based organizations and partners that can help direct survivors to resources.
