22.		Favor	Lupe Ross	A hug or a kiss on the check goes along way for someone incarcerated. It gives the youth/families hope that people care. It's good for the youth mental trauma they are going through. A crime may or may not have been committed but you still have to make good decisions during your incarceration your family and advocates are still there for you. We have metal detectors that can scan for drugs even as simple as a mouth check for drugs. The problem is not always the families it is mostly the unethical employees that bring the drugs in. Lupe Ross
