CREDIBLE MESSENGER MOVEMENT

Program Model Overview
August, 2021
In order to help break current cycles of violence, justice system involvement, and marginalization; and to address the long-term impacts on young people of color, sustained investment in the most impacted communities is required.

Such an investment should focus on the recruitment, development, and empowerment of Credible Messengers - indigenous natural leaders who have successfully navigated their own prior involvement in the justice system, share similar life experiences with current justice-involved young people, and are poised to have a transformative impact on an individual, family, community and systemic level.
Credible Messengers Practice Transformative Mentoring, which is:

- Designed to promote Healing, Development and Restoration

Credible Messenger Mentoring in Secure Settings

Secure facilities for court-involved youth are inherently problematic, partly because they artificial settings that run a high risk of institutionalizing and otherwise doing harm to the young people they house. Historically, detention centers and various other secure youth correctional facilities have engaged in various forms of abusive and inadequate treatment of youth. Among the practices that have been particularly harmful are isolation, shackling, the use of pepper spray, various forms of corporal punishment, and deprivation of basic needs. More subtle, yet equally harmful impacts include inadequate access to education, behavioral health services, culturally appropriate programming and disconnection from family & community supports.

In this era of reform, many these and other harmful practices continue to be abolished and access to critical services is increasing. This progress has been achieved via a series of measures, including legislation, local policy change, increased emphasis on evidence-based practices and processes of internal culture changes centered on more restorative, youth development informed approaches.

One emerging practice is Credible Messenger Mentoring, that brings highly trained community members into secure facilities to provide “transformative mentoring” to facility residents via a series of programs and activities. While not traditional agency employees, Credible Messengers work in conjunction with various facility program staff and clinical treatment staff to provide a holistic set of supports to the youth.
A team of credible messengers will provide intensive transformative mentoring services to youth being placed in detention.

Those services will include restorative group sessions, individual mentoring sessions, conflict resolution, and co-navigation of related programs and services provided in the detention hall.

The credible messenger team will collaborate with various probation/detention staff in planning, administering, and facilitating youth engagement functions; and will participate in relevant staff meetings to support the overall goals of youth healing, restoration, development and preparation for reintegration into the community.
