

178 NEW INTERNS JOIN LA GENERAL

Every year, a new cohort of physicians crosses the threshold from medical school into residency training — and this year, 178 of them chose LA General Medical Center as the place to begin that journey.

JUNE 24, 2026 · LA General Office of Public Relations

Selected from a highly competitive national applicant pool, these new interns represent the full promise of what medicine can be: rigorous, compassionate, and deeply attuned to the communities they serve. They arrive with strong scientific training and something equally important — a genuine commitment to patient-centered care.

"These physicians represent the future of healthcare and bring a passion for learning, service, and patient-centered care."

Over the coming years, they'll train shoulder-to-shoulder with LA General's dedicated faculty, residents, fellows, and staff — caring for patients across the breadth of Los Angeles County. That's not a small thing. Los Angeles is one of the most diverse, complex, and dynamic metropolitan areas in the world, and LA General sits at its center, serving those who need it most.

As one of the nation's premier public teaching hospitals, LA General offers something rare: a learning environment where clinical excellence, innovation, and community service aren't competing priorities — they reinforce each other. The clinical volume, case complexity, and diversity of patient need here accelerates learning in ways that can't be replicated elsewhere.

That environment doesn't happen by accident. It's built by the thousands of faculty, staff, and senior trainees who invest in the success of each new cohort — who answer questions at 2 a.m., model how to have hard conversations with patients and families, and demonstrate what it means to treat every person who walks through those doors with dignity.

To our 178 new interns: welcome. The work is hard, the hours are long, and the stakes are real. But you've chosen one of the best places in the country to become the physician you set out to be. LA General is proud to support you — every step of the way.
