V. New Business

a. JJCC Evaluator

i. RAND Corporation Presentation

Adam Bettino, Chief Deputy, Probation Department, introduced Dr. Stephanie Holliday, RAND Corporation, to conduct the presentation. Audio time stamp: 20:20-20:24

Dr. Stephanie Holliday, RAND Corp., began with an evaluation progress update. A PowerPoint was shown on screen during the presentation. During 2021, the evaluations that are in process included two programs from Department of Mental Health, Public Defender's Office, and Juvenile Special Needs (Mental Health) Court.

She discussed future programs for evaluation in 2022. The factors considered in their selection for the next set of potential programs for evaluation included input from stakeholders and the recency of prior evaluation efforts. Upon review, the recent evaluation methods appeared rigorous and similar to the type of evaluation RAND would mirror. For those programs, rather than completing another evaluation in quick succession, it would be prudent to utilize the funding to evaluate programs that had not been recently evaluated. RAND attempted to group programs with similar focus, that have a similar population of interest. She provided an update regarding data collection and a snapshot of the number of interviews completed and scheduled. Regarding the 2022 programs to be evaluated, they began scheduling interviews and outreach with the identified programs. Additionally, they created a list of possible options for evaluation in 2023 and 2024.

Dr. Stephanie Holliday, RAND Corp., moved on to provide the results of the Gap Analysis report. In 2018, Research Development and Associates (RDA) completed a gap analysis and identified 7 best practices for juvenile justice systems. The report identified several actionable recommendations related to the types of service approaches, service types offered, and system capacity and administration. RAND's analysis effort included conceptualizing an opportunity to update and expand on RDA's prior report. RAND reviewed RDAs previously identified best practices to determine if they were still supported by the research evidence, and whether any new best practices had emerged in the past three years. Additionally, they wanted to understand the extent to which those best practices were reflected in the JJCPA portfolio of services. They took a different approach to think about how the process of JJCPA portfolio of services are planned and how the funding allocations are made.

RAND divided the process into three (3) stages for their review (information gathering, planning and allocations and adoption). She stated RAND used four (4) data sources to complete the analysis. The data sources included: 1: Review of the academic and gray literature; 2: Conducted JJCPA document review; 3: Conducted a JJCC survey (sent to all members, and 16 JJCC members responded); 4: Conducted interviews with a sample of JJCC member and Probation staff. Ultimately RAND identified eight (8) best practices for Juvenile Justice systems. Seven (7) of the eight (8) were identified by RDA and continue to have the support of the literature. An additional practice emerged from RAND's review of the literature regarding retention to program implementation and fidelity. Regarding document analysis, they initially matched four (4) documents reviewed, (CMJJP, funding requests, JJCC-CAC Youth Service Needs Assessment results, and the Request for Community Feedback) against the identified eight (8) best practices to see whether, and how, the best practices were represented. The review reflected that while multiple practices were not receiving formal attention in the documents, the continuum of services was most clearly present in each document. Providing a continuum of services from prevention to intervention is the best practice that is most well-defined in the CMJJP. There are clear definitions of at-promise youth, youth contacts with law enforcement, youth on probation and descriptions of how the different categories of youth map onto the continuum of services from primary intervention to intervention. Additionally, it includes a funding strategy across the continuums that includes percentages for each of the strategies (primary intervention to intervention). While that was clearly defined, she stated that racial equity is included in the CMJJP and included a statement that it should embrace a call for an end to racism. However, it does not include the explicit guidance as to what that might look like in practice. This is suggesting that if there is a desire to reflect these best practices in programmatic and funding guidance, then there might be a need to improve the alignment between these documents and the best practices. A JJCC survey provided insight into consideration of best practices in funding decisions. Based on all these findings, RAND developed a set of recommendations for the three (3) phases. Each of these recommendations was developed with the goal of improving the alignment of JJCPA funded programs with the best practices. The details regarding the recommendations are included in PowerPoint slides 20-22. She reiterated that the Gap Analysis report was expected to be available in December 2021. She indicated anyone interested had the opportunity to be added to RAND's email distribution list and they could email her directly to be added to the list. Audio time stamp: 20:26-51:27, 51:46-51:55,52:11-52:46

Adam Bettino, Chief Deputy, Probation Department, provided a correction to accurately reflect the CMJJP should be for FY 2022-2023 as opposed to FY 2023-2024, as listed on the agenda. He thanked the Ad-Hoc Subcommittee for their work. He stated between September and December of 2021, the JJCC-CMJJP Ad-Hoc Subcommittee met nine (9) times to review and revise the CMJJP and to develop a recommended spending plan. He stated that the JJCC-JJCPA funding recommendations would be discussed and covered in more detail during the January 2022 JJCC meeting. He stated that nine (9) of the nine (9) Ad-Hoc Subcommittee members voted for the draft CMJJP. Additionally, seven (7) of the nine (9) Ad-Hoc Subcommittee members voted for the draft spending plan. He introduced Mercy Santoro, LACO Parks and Recreation, to present the agenda item. Audio time stamp: 53:24-55:32, 1:24:30-1:25:33, 1:28:13-1:28:22, 1:28:30-1:28:35

Mercy Santoro, LACO Parks and Recreation, JJCC-CMJJP Ad-Hoc Subcommittee Co-Chair, provided the presentation. The CMJJP Ad-Hoc Subcommittee Report was shown on screen during the presentation. She announced the nine (9) other (not including herself) JJCC-CMJJP Ad-Hoc Subcommittee members by name and title to acknowledge the substantial amount of time and work by the Ad-Hoc Subcommittee. She stated that the CMJJP was developed based on a philosophy of partnership between diverse public agencies and CBOs to promote positive youth development and prevent youth delinquency through shared responsibility, collaboration and in coordinated action. The CMJJP and the funding is a coordinated effort for a continuum of care for youth and families to navigate as seamlessly as possible. The CMJJP is an important document and serves as both theoretical and practical foundation for which programs and services are selected, implemented and evaluated. The Ad-Hoc Subcommittee spent significant time regarding transparency and accountability regarding justice outcome reporting requirements. They focused on providing greater communication and transparency regarding submissions by funded organizations. The Ad-Hoc Subcommittee ensured the CMJJP reflected required justice outcome data be provided by funded agencies, and that data is captured for evaluations. A prime concern was how to consider incorporating the RAND evaluation process. It was recommended that the JJCC-CMJJP Ad-Hoc Subcommittee convene in the Spring of 2022 rather than the Fall of 2022 to provide an opportunity to review the local and national landscape regarding juvenile justice reform. Additionally, to review the gap analysis, best practices, and to engage in dialogue, discussion and in action to update the CMJJP. Followed by the CMJJP Ad-Hoc Subcommittee reconvening in the Fall to begin the process of reviewing the funding allocations. She indicated Appendix B updates include the collection and submission requirements for JJCPA funded programs and are presented in much greater detail. Additionally, estimated expenditures will be required by the funded programs in October 2022 to provide assistance with informing the expenditure plan review by the Ad-Hoc Subcommittee. An outlined process was added in the event that an organization would be unable to submit the required Probation data and reporting requirements.

She began the review of revisions within the Plan under the heading: JJCC Collaborative Approach to the CMJJP. Upon review, the Ad-Hoc Subcommittee made two changes: 1: Youth were added to the section after advocates and; 2: The following reports were added: Los Angeles County Office of Violence Prevention, The Early Implementation Strategies and The Blueprint for Peace and Healing and the Los Angeles County Alternatives to Incarceration, Alternatives to Incarceration Workgroup Final Report. Under the heading covering key stakeholders, youth voice was captured as well as Youth Justice Advisory Group and Los Angeles County Youth Commission.

Within the timeline, a new step was added within the section FY 2022-23 CMJJP, Planning, Development, and JJCPA Funding Allocation Approval Process. Step One will provide additional time for CMJJP revision by convening the JJCC-CMJJP Ad-Hoc Subcommittee in the Spring of 2022 (March through May 2022) for an in-depth review of best practices and revision, followed by reconvening in the Fall of 2022 to work on the funding submissions. She stated the spring convening may be something completed every few years to allow more comprehensive time for review of best practices and better alignment of definitions for funding allocations. The Ad-Hoc Subcommittee suggested the Gap Analysis be utilized with a literature review to ensure the ability to implement best practices and align documents and funding around positive youth development. Step Two addressed the JJCC-CAC Youth Needs Assessment survey. She stated they felt strongly about a way to formalize the survey process to improve coordination of the survey design and additionally, to work in coordination with the JJCC-Governance Ad-Hoc Subcommittee to review the survey process. In Step Three the Ad-Hoc Subcommittee expressed a need to solicit and accept feedback on projects and programs. Step Four addressed governmental requests and submissions for funding. Step Five focused on evaluation and incorporating RAND data. Steps Five and Twelve include standard dates regarding grant submission requirements.

CMJJP's Appendix B included the following additions: 1) Submissions will include the strategies the agency would support with the respective funding amounts for each strategy listed; 2) Updated the agency notification letter. Should an agency receive JJCPA funding, it is imperative that the agency comply with providing justice outcome data/information to the Probation Department. The revision also included information on monthly reporting requirements; 3) An acknowledgement was added to the agency's notification letter to include clear information regarding the data requirements and expectations regarding the submission deadlines. She stated that the State Auditor's Office informed the Probation Department to collect the data (based on JJCPA State Audit). The required data must be assessed when looking at program effectiveness and reducing juvenile justice crime for the full evaluation period and that failure to provide required data to Probation may result in loss of grant funds.

Within the CMJJP's required report tables that are included and updated annually, she did not cover each table. Rather, she pointed out that student absenteeism data information was not valid due to the COVID-19 Pandemic, therefore, the 2019 data was included. She acknowledged that the JJCC-CAC survey findings were updated, and she summarized additional updates to the CMJJP.

Later, in response to JJCC Member Discussion, she provided context that the funding discussion would occur during the January meeting. She stated that the presentation was to provide overall framing of the funding recommendations so that JJCC Members and the public have an opportunity to prepare for the January (2022) meeting discussion. Audio time stamp: 55:32-1:24:22, 1:26:18-1:26:26, 1:27:21-1:27:40, 1:56:24-1:57:12, 1:57:21-1:57:24

2022-23 funding allocation recommendation handout. She briefly framed the JJCC-CMJJP Ad-Hoc Subcommittee's process. The Ad-Hoc Subcommittee looked carefully at the FY 2019-2020 funding allocations since it was the last funding allocation process that occurred prior to the COVID-19 anomaly. Another area they reviewed included percentage of allocation of funding to CBOs. The Ad-Hoc Subcommittee added the $622,401.00 emergent funds from the previous fiscal year to the total funding budget available. They also considered carry-over amounts and program FY 2021-22 estimated expenditures. They wanted to maintain continuity of prior base and growth funding allocations. In the forefront was continuity of services in light of the changing landscape due to COVID 19, as well as other countywide initiatives. She indicated they wanted to provide context as they prepare for the January (2022) JJCC meeting. Audio time stamp: 2:01:48-2:07:42
